BEHIND THE PHOTOGRAPHS

In the early days I was shooting 35-mm unposed work, because that was the only style I knew. But as time went on I suddenly had people like Rod Stewart coming to my studio saying, "We've got two hours. What do you want me to do?" So I had to start thinking of ways to pose people. I was a very reluctant director at first because I was quite happy just photographing things as they were. My portruit style evolved out of the Rolling

Stone cover shoots. Of course, the havday of that was in the late 70s, early '80s, when we were doing Steve Martin, and Bette Midler with the roses. That was
